

BLOOD RUN SITE

Junction of Blood Run Creek and the Big Sioux River

This extensive site, which also continues across the Big Sioux River into South Dakota, contains the remains of an Oneota Indian village and numerous conical mounds. Limited archeological investigations of the mounds indicate that the site may have been occupied as early as A.D. 1300. Occupation over many centuries by different tribes has left abundant cultural remains. (Also in Lincoln County, South Dakota.)